

Adversity

if she was the rebound, you were the dribble.

Our colleagues in league, worse than we, advertise aversion to adversity, while we

resound;

recalling dictionaries lie,

prefixing suffixes to terms love'd like.

You found a bug last night; lured

lustrous good luck back. Licking

lilies, thirsty for summer, he texted you on paper, messaged

you → → → → → past tensereceived receipt at dawn today, like verb the noun; call-

to-action;

or Latin

affirmations

of seizures

induced

by advertising,

inad-

vertently, an

aversion

to adversity; and

in a verse,

at university, you

woke up

early, in a poem.
